

Hi, there! When I heard you had lost another tooth, I was very excited because yours are always wonderful and some of my prized possessions. However, I looked and looked under your pillow and oh my goodness, I couldn't find it anywhere!

Please, don't worry. These things happen. Why, just last year I myself misplaced a big bag of yellow, brittle teeth and couldn't find it anywhere until Christmas when I saw them strung together with garland and hanging on my Christmas tree. Apparently, my assistant (who needs glasses) thought they were popcorn kernels and strung them up to decorate.

Please keep taking good care of your teeth so they stay nice and white. It really does make your chewing much easier, and makes things much simpler for my assistant, too.

So don't worry about me not finding your tooth under your pillow. I completely understand, and am leaving you a small gift anyway.

Please tell my friends at Rominger Dental that I said hello. They're the best, and all think highly of you, as well.

Love,

The Tooth Fairy
